

T. Daniels Corporation

Press Release – December 6, 2004.

T. Daniels is proud to announce that it has been awarded the Constructech Vision Award.

This award is in honor of those companies that have realized the advantages of advanced technologies to their everyday businesses.

"This year's winners emphasize what it takes to operate a successful business in the construction industry and related fields. The winners have demonstrated their commitment and understanding of how technology can help them effectively improve and enhance their companies and their bottom-line," says Peggy Smedley, editorial director and publisher of Constructech magazine. "It was great to meet and greet all of the winners and personally congratulate them on their win."

T. Daniels Corporation received their Vision Award along with Conti Electric of Sterling Heights, MI for their partnership in the commitment to bring accuracy and efficiency to the world of accounting through the software program Celerity designed by T. Daniels Corporation. "This award validates our commitment to providing our customers with pragmatic methods to operate their businesses", says Tim Ricketts of T. Daniels Corporation.

Conti Electric had always been at the forefront of using sophisticated technology to automate various business processes. While these systems worked fine individually, the moving of information between systems became very frustrating. Conti Electric turned to the path of integration, particularly for its accounting and purchasing to cut down dramatically on manual entry. The company turned to a material management system called Celerity designed by T. Daniels Corporation.

The Purchase Orders generated in the program are also created in the accounting purchase order module. Now when Conti Electric generates a purchase order, job cost commitments and vendor outstanding commitments are automatically updated, as well. Conti Electric took this integration process to another level. The software is also integrated with its inventory module, allowing Conti Electric to obtain lists of more than 100,000 previously purchased items from its vendors. This allows the company to take vendor inventory information and import it into the accounting system, while also providing item search functionality that allows Conti Electric to easily search the database consisting of more than 100,000 items.

Constructech Vision Awards judges believe Conti Electric has done an excellent job tapping off-the-shelf software for its needs. Vision Awards judge Christian Burger says, "This is a good use of best in class software without sacrificing integration."

About Constructech Magazine

Constructech magazine is turning the promise of technology and automation solutions into reality for the construction and facility management communities. Technology is providing the most effective way to improve bottom line results, and Constructech is the only magazine dedicated to providing industry professionals with the necessary information to make sound technology decisions (www.constructech.com).

About T. Daniels Corporation

T. Daniels is a national software business-to-business solution provider specializing in construction management systems. We offer a wide range of products and services including; accounting, project management, scheduling service management and document imaging. For more information contact us at (810) 629-0131 or www.tdaniels.com.